

Mrs Nester's Home Learning Weekly Challenge: 13th April 2020

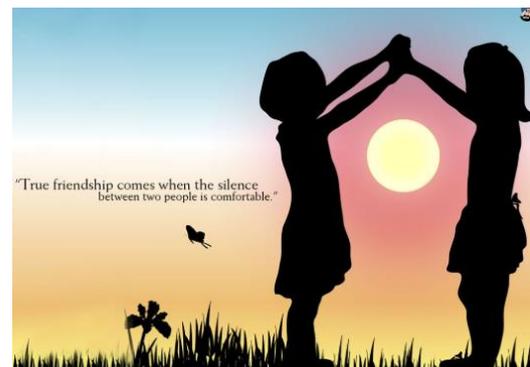

It has been so lovely to see some of the home learning tasks that you have been doing at home this week. What amazing artists, bakers, scientists, musicians and mathematicians you are! When I was thinking about what to do for my next challenge I was reflecting on how much we are missing our friends in my house. My children, Mr. Nester and myself are all finding it very difficult to distance ourselves from our friends and I thought if we are you finding it hard you must be too which made me think I wanted to think about friendship this week.

1. Can you paint a picture; draw a portrait of one of your school friends that you are missing?

2. Can you make a postcard to send your friend? Use an old piece of card, write a message of friendship, and try to find out their address to write it carefully so the postman can read it.

3. Find a stamp and take a walk to a local post box to send your postcard. If not and you know where your friend lives walk past and from a safe distance deliver it through the letter box. Think how delighted and surprised they will be!

4. Make your own family sky of friendship. Get a black piece of paper and if you have some star stickers great! If not just cut out some star shapes and stick them on every time you see someone in your house showing an act of friendship or kindness. See how many stars you can collect in a week. As a reward decide on a 'time in treat' for all the family which you could plan to do once we are all able to go outside.
