

I hope you have all been having fun in the sun and enjoying your sports day activities. I can see that on purple mash a lot of you (especially my scientist friends!) have been enjoying the minibeast activities. I have found some other fun minibeast activities for you. You might like to:

- Carry out your own minibeast survey in your garden. Once you have collected your information, you could make your own pictogram on purple mash.
- You could draw like a scientist and show me what one of your minibeasts looked like.
- You could think carefully about where minibeasts like to live - do you remember the work we did on habitats? A habitat was not just an animal's home, it is where it could shelter and find everything it needs to survive. You could make your own minibeast hotel for your garden and see who moves in!
- You might want to paint or draw different butterflies to decorate your home with - you will find some minibeast paint projects on purple mash too.
- You could write a fact file about your favourite minibeast.

Something to keep you cool this weekend....

There is a recipe card on purple mash if you wanted to try your own. Yum!

Today I am thinking about things I am grateful for. I am grateful that I have a wonderful class who cheer me up every day. I am grateful for my family and I am grateful for the sunshine today. Try to think of three things you feel grateful for today. Take care, Mrs Simmonds
