

So this is our last week of school. We have so much to celebrate - your amazing reading and writing, your speedy number fluency, the information you have learnt about India and the continents and all of the facts you have learnt about animal groups, habitats and diets. Aren't you amazing?

I would like you to choose a way of celebrating your brilliance. You could:

- Make a map of India showing all of the wonderful things that you know about the country - the animals that live there, the climate, the Himalayas, the tea plantations and the Indian flag.
- Make your own Rangoli patterns - there are some paint projects on purple mash.
- You could make the mint and cucumber raita that we made at school - don't forget the poppadum's!
- Make a poster about the seven continents and five oceans - Five Oceans Song - YouTube <https://youtu.be/uQzrSIXF2SQ> These songs might help!
- You could be like Emma Jane and write your own post card from India - there is a writing project on purple mash or you could handwrite your own.
- Draw or paint the animals from India.
- Write some facts about Asian elephants, peacocks or cobra snakes.
- Research some physical features of India like the Thar Desert, the Himalayas or the River Ganges.

There are some of our favourite maths games on purple mash too like 2 race. Let me know if you have other favourites.

I hope that you spend this week feeling proud of everything you have achieved this year.

We are all so very proud of you.
